when a runaway Second avenue open trolley car plunged down the slope at Forty-seventh street flaming from a burned-out fuse. Women and children the carriage and wrecked 4t.

The shock of collision turned the four-

The car, south bound, had just gained the top of the slope at Forty-seventh street. It was jammed with people on their way down town to work. Many were standing in the narrow spaces between the seats. Just as the heavy car tween the seats. Just as the heavy car the seats. passed the top of the hill and had gathered headway down the incline there came a great flash of green and yellow flame that seared across the ceiling and INSISTED ON RIOT flared out at either side.

Women in a Panic.

The women went mad. Some threw themselves blindly from the car to fall beadlong to the street. Others clung terically. From the motor beneath the floor arose a greasy, blinding wreath
